

#WWACReadingChallenge

A webcomic

A comic you've never heard of before

A comic you picked up just because of its awesome cover

A comic with no words

An award-winning comic

A comic featuring an X-Man who has died at least 3 times

A black and white comic

A comics anthology

A comic written by someone who doesn't typically write comics

A comic from a publisher whose titles you haven't read before

A comic featuring a cover you've judged harshly

A comic featuring music

Reread your fav childhood comic

A book about comics

A book of comic strips

An X-Men comic where you completely understand the plot

A comic with a lot of text (what's a lot? You decide.)

Your mom's favorite comic (no mom, or mom not into comics? Choose a friend or family member at random!)

A comic featuring Batman's origin story (just in case you forgot what his origin story was)

A comic with more than 5 variant covers

A comic reviewed at WWAC

A fashion comic

A comic based on a video game

A comic with more than 3 queer characters

The third comic in your to-read stack of shame (I know you have one)

A comic published in the '80s that's not by Alan Moore or Frank Miller

Walk into a comic shop, spin around, and point at a comic on the new rack. Read that one

Volume three of a series you haven't read yet (volumes 1 and 2 are optional)

An ongoing series that started this year

An ongoing series that ended this year

A comic recommended by a librarian to you, specifically

A comic in your favorite film genre

A comic you think your dog would like (no dog? Chose a different pet, or go with a comic your friend's dog would like)

A comic you've watched the TV adaptation of

The comic adaptation (or continuation) of a TV show

A nonfiction comic

A comic about The Economy (there are so many more of these than there should be, I promise)

A comic translated from another language

A comic about life in a culture that's different from yours (and yet the same, in so many ways)

An autobiographical comic